WE PLACE

SAFETY FIRST

Construction sites are often considered to be high-risk work environments. Employees can face several health and safety hazards during one work shift. Asbestos in older buildings is one example of a common hazard, along with other airborne toxins and fibers. Falling materials and unintentional building collapse, along with injuries from machines, can also cause injuries to employees on the job site. However, MVDW Group implements a construction site safety plan that aims to help keep employees safe and the project on track to meet the deadline.

We believe that implementing a safety plan will reduce workplace accidents and the costs that result from injuries and damage to machinery and materials. Our health and safety plans are tailor made of the task at hand; we consider the environment employees are working in. Since hazards on a construction site are constantly changing as the project progresses, our plan is able to evolve.

We get our teams' input, our employees are the ones that see and manage workplace dangers every day. They can provide insight and ensure that everything necessary is included in the plan. Everyone i.e management and staff need to agree on the safety plan and have open lines of communication.

Health and safety in construction are important for employers and employees, and while our plan will be different than others, we believe that these elements should be included in every health and safety plan.

- Management Leadership
- Employee Participation
- Identify and Assess Hazards
- Prevention and Hazard Control
- Solutions to the problem
- Administration controls in place
- Communication Protocols
- Education and Training
- Regularly Evaluate the Safety Plan

We at MVDW Group SA prioritize our Construction Site Safety. The health and safety of employees on construction sites is important, and implementing protocols will mitigate existing and potential hazards.
